Quo Vadis

Among the host of interesting characters in George Kleine's marvelous photo drama "Quo Vadis" which comes to the Opera House on Monday, Nov. 22nd, for an engagement of one night, none are more enjoyed and respected by the audiences than Sig. Castellani as Ursus, the giant slave so thoroughly devoted to his mistress Lygia. He completely realizes in his appearance, height and muscular power, all that our mind pictures of the physical giant who could uplift trees and even tear a huge bull asunder. Castellani was not an actor until he posed for this photo-drama.

The Cines Company made Castellani a flattering offer for his services for one year and put him under the direction of a competent stage manager for six months. In the photo-drama his performance looms up prominently with all the other players of long experience and he wins as much by his simplicity and naturalness as they for the complexity of their art.

This instance only serves to emphasize the amount of attention to detail, and wonderful care the Cines Company displayed in making "Quo Vadis" which is well deservedly called the premiere photo drama of the world. While this great drama has cost thousands of dollars to produce it costs you almost nothing to see it.

First Use of Camera in War.
The camera was first employed officially in war during the conflict in the Crimea in 1854-56, and although the art of photography was then but sixteen years old, some fine pictures were obtained. In the American Civil war the camera was also largely used.

DO YOU know of anyone who is old enough to read, who has not seen that sign at a railroad crossing?

If everyone has seen it at some time or other, then why doesn't the railroad let the sign rot away? Why does the railroad company continue to keep those signs at every crossing?

Maybe you think, Mr. Merchant, "Most everybody knows my store, I don't have to advertise."

Your store and your goods need more advertising than the railroads need to warn people to "Look Out for the Cars."

Nothing is ever completed in the advertising world.

The Department Stores are a very good example—they are continually advertising—and they are continually doing a good business.

If it pays to run a few ads round
